MILTON, the Wall Street giant, had one special form of relaxation. This was poker. Every Friday afternoon, if the market was quiet enough to skip Saturday, he sequestered down to Florida and joined a small group of his own cronies who were addicted to the same pleasure. In Milton's subdued and massive Wall Street office, Aurelius Smith heard that all might not be quite right with these poker games. One of the regular players had introduced, perhaps a little carelessly, a business acquaintance who had recently come to America from Europe. Emeroch was a large and impressive man who seemed to have plenty of money and whose poker technique was superb. Milton did not object to the large sums of money which Emeroch was winning but his sixth sense warned him that something was wrong. "It is possible that he is just a better player than the rest of you," suggested Smith.

Milton suggested that he take the detective down to Florida and let him sit in at a few games so that he might scrutinize the suspected man. "I know the game very well," returned Smith. "But I never play cards for money. My memory is too good and I have trained myself to read faces too well. It would not be fair to my opponents."

Milton insisted, however, and gained his point. After dinner on the following Friday evening Smith and Milton sat down with two other financiers in the library of a palatial Florida mansion. A table was arranged for cards. As yet Emeroch had not arrived. "Over a short length of time poker is a game of chance," Smith said, "but when many hands are dealt, it becomes pure science and the best player must win."

At that moment Emeroch limped into the room. He stepped only upon the fore part of his right foot and leaned heavily upon a cane each time that foot came to the floor. He shifted his cane for a moment to his left hand while he shook hands with Smith. After that he sank painfully into a chair at the table, placed his cane between his legs and reached for a glass.

The play lasted until the small hours of the morning. From the first it was apparent that there was not a novice at the table. When the game ended there were only two winners—Emeroch and Smith. Emeroch had won $17,000 and Smith had won $500.

"Did you spot anything?" asked Milton of Smith when they were alone. "He is the best poker player I ever met," returned Smith. "He knows exactly how to bet his cards and his face is a mask. I think he is honest and yet—"

"What?" questioned Milton. "Most of his big killings were made on his own deal," added Smith. "And he never bet and lost on his own deal."

DO YOU LIKE CAKE?

From the lovely gingerbread to the luscious melting sweetness of the Lady Baltimore, there are cakes and still more cakes for every occasion, birthday, Christmas, wedding and christening cakes.

With cake for dessert there is to an infinite variety from which to choose. A square of gingerbread with whipped cream flavored with a bit of chopped preserved ginger and sweetened with its syrup, there is nothing equal to it, if you like ginger.

Chocolate cakes seem to hold the preference, they may be rich and luscious, full of soft rich fillings of fruit and nuts, or plain covered with a fudge frosting; any kind, if chocolate, is welcome.

Ribbon cake, an old-fashioned favorite, is another pretty cake with its light and dark layers and fruit filling.

Cup cakes filled with various fillings are always popular. Scoop out the center leaving a shell filling or sweetened and flavored whipped cream and topped with a maraschino cherry.

Chocolate cup cakes filled with a mocha or a caramel filling are especially tasty.

After all the care in ingredients, exact measurements and careful mixing, comes the baking. The oven should be slow for fruit cakes and those with molasses and brown sugar. Divide the time the cake should take into quarters. The first quarter it should begin to rise; the second, finishing and browning; the third, finishing and browning; the fourth, finishing and browning.

Cool on a rack to avoid a moist and sticky bottom when the cake is cut. If no rack is at hand use anything to keep the bottom of the pan free from the table.

Too much flavoring is like too much perfume—in poor taste. It is better to blend a few drops of vanilla, lemon and almond or two of any desired flavoring extracts.

TWO-MINUTE SERMON

by REV. GEORGE HENRY

DISSATISFACTION

At a banquet of the Chamber of Commerce in Plainville, an ex-president quoted me as saying: "Let us be tremendously dissatisfied." Now I do not remember having said this thing, but it has been my thought. The man who is satisfied has reached the end of his activity, the end of ambition, the end of development. He becomes like a pool of stagnant water—scum rises to the top, ooze settles beneath it. God forbid that before our eyes we should ever cease to hold our ideal; that we should ever cease to strive for something better than we have attained. A "tremendous dissatisfaction" with ourselves and our attainments will spur us on to greater achievement. The self-righteous alone are satisfied. Swinerton has said that "a man be satisfied with his circumstances, but not with his achievements, and the man who is satisfied with what he has done has no future but the dust-bin."

DRIVERS' LICENSE

LAW AGITATED

Vigorous campaigns for adoption of the Automobile Drivers' License Law will be waged in 28 states during the next few months. In several states where existing laws lack "teeth," an effort will be made to remodel them to conform with the standard ordinance recommended by the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety.

Twelve states now have drivers' license laws and all of them have experienced a downward accident trend. According to a survey made by the National Safety Council, there have been 20 per cent fewer fatalities since the adoption of the laws than there would have been had these 12 states had the same percentage increase as the non-license states. This amounts to a saving of thousands of lives annually.

Many safety authorities believe such a law is the most important single step toward reducing accidents. No careful driver need fear it. Its purpose is to weed out the unfit, the negligent, the reckless and the "accident repeaters," and to prevent beginners from driving until they are competent to handle a car.

An overwhelming majority of motorists are responsible and competent. But the small minority which is careless and incompetent, has given us the greatest accident toll in the world. They are a menace to the lives and property of all other drivers. They must be barred from the public highways.

Wandering Back

by A. J. Dunlap.

It was miles from our place to a neighbor; There were days when we saw none at all— For the horses were tired in the evening And no telephone hung on the wall. And the days flowed along like a river With a peace in their quiet and charm That alone could be found in the country, In the days of the pioneer farm.

When I tire of this up-to-date frenzy With its clashing and clamorous glare; When I'm weary of pushing and rushing, And of life with its windows ajar; Then I quietly wander in fancy Back again to the farm where I knew The deep peace of the sunrise and sunset, And the cornfields that glittered with dew.

THE OLD FARM SERIES

CAN I Learn to Fly?

By WILLIAM R. NELSON

How to Enroll

CAN I learn to fly? To answer that question I decided to take a course in piloting an airplane. That decision led me to some unusual experiences. And it picked several bubbles regarding flying machines, flyers, and flying itself. Uncle Sam's Department of Commerce is interested in commercial aviation. I learned first, that department's aviation section "lays down the law" governing commercial flyers, flyers, airplanes, and flying schools. It says who, how, and where they may do so. In what types of planes. And how and what students must be taught.

To enroll for a pilot's course at a school approved by the Department of Commerce, one must first pass a rigid physical examination given by a physician designated by the department. Two examinations are offered. That of the student who plans to make flying his or her business, being more complete, costs $15. The other, for the private flyer, costs $10. The fees are standard.

The examinations, too, are standard and are similar to insurance examinations plus unusual tests of the sense of balance, ability to judge distance, and for color-blindness.

Flying courses are of three standard grades, each training the student for a particular pilot's license. Costs vary, of course, but do not exceed $200. Private pilot's license, $600; limited commercial pilot's license, $1,000; transport pilot's license, $1,500.

These prices include all costs except food and room. The student is insured against personal injury and death and against liability for damage to the plane or other property.

The course for the private pilot's license generally calls for twenty hours of flying—ten of instruction and ten of solo or flight alone. The limited commercial license requires fifty hours in the air. And the transport license stipulates two hundred hours of flying time.

Department of Commerce rules governing approved schools require students and instructors to wear parachutes, but no jumps in them are required.

The license tests include both flying and written examinations, the written portion covering studies taught in ground school classes. Such courses can be taken ahead of the flying tests or concurrently with them.

DOUBLING ROAD FUNDS

It is said that a bill will be introduced in the next Congress to double the existing appropriation for road work. If the bill passes, $350,000,000 will be available for federal aid.

The unemployment situation and aid to the drought have stimulated the road movement. The construction of roads gives employment to thousands of farmers and others who at present have little or no source of livelihood, at the same time providing the nation with an invaluable asset. Long after the present "depression year" is forgotten the roads will remain, paying dividends in the form of fast, year-round transportation, increased tourist travel, business for small town merchants and lower motor vehicle operating costs.

The United States is fairly well supplied with main highways but in large agricultural areas roads are almost the same as in the horse-and-wagon days. Mud, snow and ice are still barriers between the farmer and the outside world.

Agricultural areas are entitled to good roads. States should follow the lead of the federal government and encourage by every practical method the construction of year round, farm-to-market roads.

ALBERT BURBANK SANBORN

Mr. Sanborn, better known as Bert, was born in Bethel, Jan. 12, 1863, and died Nov. 16, 1930. He was the son of Lewis A. and Ellen (Grover) Sanborn and acquired his education in the schools of his native town where the greater part of his life has been lived.

On Sept. 1st, 1902, he was united in marriage to Miss Annie Maude Sawyer and their home has been at the Sanborn farm above Bethel village, near Skillingston.

A skilled machinist, he was ever in demand in that capacity at different mills and had worked at his trade in various places before his health failed, when not engaged in farming. His health has been poor for a number of years and for many months he had endured much suffering. His wife has cared for him with utmost devotion as long as her strength permitted, and during the last few weeks a nurse has been in attendance also.

Mr. Sanborn is survived by his wife and one sister, Miss Ella Sanborn of Bethel, also one brother, Charles Sanborn of Newburyport, Mass. An older sister, Mrs. Carrie Sanborn Scribner, died a few years ago.

Funeral services were held at his late home Wednesday, Nov. 19, Rev. C. B. Oliver and Rev. H. C. Dabell officiating. There was a profusion of beautiful flowers. Burial was at Riverside cemetery.

THE CITIZEN-PRINTERS

A real old fashioned Merry Christmas

Isn't going to be a financial strain for those who plan to do their gift shopping at P. M. & B.

because our PRICES are the LOWEST in years for gifts of traditional P. M. & B. quality, distinction, individuality and charm

And in addition to lower prices, many other gift buying advantages center about this store—standing out once again as Christmas Shopping Headquarters for Portland and all Maine.

THERE'S the advantage of making your selections from all that there is to be seen. Our gift stocks are the most extensive and most varied in Maine

THERE'S the advantage of wonderfully complete assortments for every one on your Christmas list at the particular prices you wish to pay

THERE'S the thrill of finding so much that is entirely new, unusual and pleasing and so different to the ordinary run of gift suggestions

THERE'S the advantage of the P. M. & B. name which has come to mean as much on a Christmas gift as the word "Sterling" does on silver

You can follow the promptings of your heart and remember the children, loved ones, relatives and friends most liberally. Yet your expenditure will be most moderate if you gift-shop at P. M. & B.

Santa Claus will again make his home in this store

The day and hour of his arrival with his real live reindeer team will be announced in the Portland papers and by radio soon.

Santa Claus has been making us his headquarters ever since we became established in 1906, distinguishing us as the original Santa Claus store. Santa drives his real live reindeer team right to the door of the store.

We feel that in this he has been most good to us and to the children for we know of no other place in the whole wide world where he arrives in this manner.

While we can't improve on Santa, Santa himself keeps abreast of modern developments—and we will hear from him by radio soon.

Christmas and all that it stands for is again in evidence all through the Store!

An atmosphere of Christmas jollity and fun, of thrills and romance reigns supreme. The Spirit of Cordiality and Hospitality is in evidence on every hand. Friendly smiles greet you. You are in a great big, wonderful fairyland as soon as you step inside our doors. Everything that's worth while in gifts is here to make your Holiday shopping a glorious adventure. Distinctive boxes and folders enhance the attractiveness of your gifts. Helpful services relieve you of many shopping details. And you often pay less for P. M. & B. gifts than for more commonplace things elsewhere. We are never knowingly undersold.

Our gift stocks are wonderfully complete in every detail. The store is filled to overflowing with gifts from every corner of the world—gifts new this year—gifts as traditional as Christmas itself—frivolous gifts—practical gifts—luxury gifts—gifts carefully planned for every member of the family; for relatives and friends—gifts that will be prized and remembered long after Christmas, whether they be little remembrances or gifts of the most sumptuous kind. Never were we so well prepared to solve the simplest or most difficult gift problems; never were there more brilliant gifts in all P. M. & B. history. To confine your gift shopping here is to enjoy the merriest of Christmases and the lowest prices in years.

PEOPLE ARE NOT HARD UP

Notwithstanding that the impression prevails that the country is hard up and that strictest economy is necessary in the matter of expenditures, people are not hard up.

People have the money for the things they want, and as long as they have the money for the things they want they are not hard up.

In support of this contention we would call attention to the fact that bank deposits are up, building and loan deposits are on the increase, and coming down to our own community, fairs, shows and amusement places are enjoying good patronage. Owners of automobiles are driving them as usual. The gas station men report that gasoline sales show no decrease.

If there is still plenty of money in the community, it is foolish to resign to a feeling of poverty and hard times.

The situation can be greatly helped and everyone benefited if we refuse to talk hard times, and good business is already here if the minds of the people can be diverted from hard times talk long enough to permit them to buy.
